

The man whose intelligence is superior to his brothers tends to intellectualize everything, to make a literary sorting about everything that passes through his mind, but always within his heart a sensitivity still intact and innocent only asks to be develop.

It is there, in the depths of himself, that man becomes aware of his divine filiation, of the Presence of God within; it is there that his desire for perfection, redemption of himself and the whole human race will be born; it is there that man feels thirst to repair the evil of all men in the Unity between him and his brothers, then between him and God.

When the Divine Spark will spring up within, he will know that he is there, the man as he "imagined" himself in his moments of grandiloquence... He will know that he must live NOW from this inner revelation. He will no longer feel like he is wasting his life, because he will participate in human evolution at the same time as his own.

This is the true destiny of man, of all men, because all are called to this glorious state.

SUNDARI